THE VOLGANIC CLOUD.

One of the most wonderful phenomena observed in connection with the great eruption of Mauna Loa—1880-1—may be reentioned The Volcanic Cloud. It is really a most remarkable cumulus cloud, having a rough serated lower edge not unlike the corresponding portion of a thunder-cloud. In color the volcanic differs from all other clouds, and is exceedingly picturesque. It was first observed soon after the cruption occurred on Mauna Loa, Nov. 5th. 1880. From that time up to the present the volcanic cloud has been almost as much an object of interest as the lava flow which it faithfully pilots down the mountain side. It can be seen at all times hovering over the active portions of the flow, where vapor and sulphurous gases constantly arise, forming a sort of mist or veil between the flow and the cloud. The vapor is sufficiently transparent to disclose the view beyond. At the point of union with the cloud the vapor takes on a peculiar coppery color with vary the mean time. youd. At the point of union with the cloud the vapor takes on a peculiar coppery color with varying opalescent tints. The cloud appears to be stationary, that is it moves only as the lava advances. It matters little how strong the wind may blow, the cloud will only sway a little and is never blown from its position over the active fires. When seen opposed to a clear sky with the sun back of the observer, the cloud appears to be exceedingly dense, and sharply outlined with vivid white lights separting its cumulus caps from the surrounding azure. In general appearance the cloud night suggest a mountain peak capped with snow. Those portions seen in shalow afford many graduations of gray tones, while near the face the color becomes gest a mountain peak capped with snow. Those portions seen in shadow afford many graduations of gray tones, while near the face the color becomes a darker toned blue than the intermediate gray tones, varying in color according to the density of that part of the cloud producing the shadow. The afternoon light furnishes quite a different effect. If the sky be clear, and the time about an hour before sunset, we then have Manna Kea on our right with its snow clad peaks. The volcanic cloud on the left quite like another mountain, its cumulus caps made golden by the rays of the setting sun. As the shados of night creep on, this strangely wonderful cloud becomes transformed into pilliars of light, taking on a most vivid reflection from the river of fire that moves so persistently onward. It is not a wavering or flashing light like that caused by conflagration. Nor is it in color like the reflections from any usually known burning substance. In common with the lava, it has a color peculiarly its own—liquid lava is simply fire from no apparent cause—original fire, the hothest kind of fire. The reflection therefore is strange in color, varying in intensity according to the activity of the flow.

In the early stage of the eruption, the volcanic

It is to be hoped that this pillar of fire by night, and the cloud by day, may have, as I think it has been truly interpreted by the citizens of Hilo, a reasonable warning given in time that precautions are not to be neglected; the firsy monster is truly coming, but he has not come without warning, and in that the good people of the city must find their considation.

in that the good people of the city must find their consolation.

* Extract from a private letter, dated Aug. 3rd.

* * * * Last night I went to the flow with E. and D. * It was magnificent and went forward faster than I have seen it before. It was not more than half-a-mile above the Wailamas bridge, it is said. The Wailama is a tide water inlet from the sea south of Hilo, which connects with gulches from the Kukuan land. It is crossed by the volcano road by a wooden bridge, perhaps a mile south of the Hilo landing.] E. timed it (the flow) once. It went about twenty feet in seventy beats of his pulse, above where it had bursted out, it was roaring like the surf. It flowed along so fast that constantly it was heaving, pulling and bursting open with hissing sounds. This was caused by the imprisoned air which must find a vent somewhere. Then as before we occasionally heard a distant boom like a cannon. The gulch down which this flow was running (the Kukuna) had no water with the exception of an occasional pool, and was comparatively challow. As we rode along home, we saw the lower part of the ravine in which it was appointed to ran. It is quite wide and deep but where it reaches Hilo, it flats out into a very slight depression. Once we saw the reflection of the lava in a little pool as it was dropping over the edge of a rock. Just below this sight, one were surprised by another hole. I was thankful I had not fallen into that, although it was not more than five feet deep when I saw the lava flowing into it. We had crossed over, ahead of the lava and sat down to watch it, forgetting entirely that we must go back, when suddenly E. said "look here we must go back!" so we crossed back right in front of the stream pouring down toward us. I not stopping to see how near—right above us was this hole which I had not seen, and which was revealed by the lava pouring in. At first there was a fall of four or five feet, within a few moments it was level. * * To-day, (Aug. 4th) people expect to see it from the Wailama bridge comi to a safe place. Extract from a private letter, Thursday 2 P.M. Extract from a private letter, Thursday 2 p.m. Aug. 4th:

We have just come down from the flow. We rode up past the cometary to that part of the flow which is not over an eighth of a mile from the upper hill and the lower end of which is more than abreast of the upper end of the same. First we rode to the top of that hill and took a general survey. The general trend of the main body of the flow seems to be towards the hills. The tompus which is so far down looks, from the hill, as if it were headed directly towards the Waiakea mill. We rode across to that tongue and down to the lower end of it. There it was running into a cavern about thirty or forty feet long, perhaps twenty feet wide and say fifteen feet deep. When we reached there it had just begun to flow over the precipice, and was coming very sluggishly but twenty feet wide and say fifteen feet deep. When we reached there it had just begun to flow over the precipice, and was coming very sluggishly but moved for the days or more, and as yet no wood has leaked out to the public. Very possible the matter is yet uninvestigated. We would like to have an answer soon.

HAWAIL.

The movable property at the Hilo jail was removed to the Court House on Wednesday, Angust 2d, for San Francisco with a cargo of sugar and molasses.

There was a great demand for horses for the lava flow on the arrival of the steamer at Hilo on Thursday, Angust 2d, for San Francisco with a cargo of sugar and molasses.

The lava flow is making considerable headway, it has reached the to was for themselves and control of a mile distant from the sec. On Wednesday a stream of fire ran some effo feet in three hoars down the Kuhuan grieh. Many of the families in the region of the Kuhuan stream, Hilo, have already left their houses and sought refuge in other portious of the town for themselves and their the weeks and was covered with grass, ferns and trees is now a glittering waste of description of this living, moving destroying power. It must be a the ready left their houses and sought refuge in other portious of the town for themselves and their themselves and their them the supply.

Kauat.

The lava flow still approaches the town and sea, but it is chiefly massing itself on the flat just above the hills, and it will probably keep doing so, till the pressure is so great that it will burst and make quick time to the sea, we visited it last night make quick time to the sea, we visited it has higher and it is as full of fire as ever. The signs on top of Manna Loa are not encouraging, and so long as those seminal fires are in active operation, we have good cause to fear for a part, if not all, of the town of Hilo. The flow is but fifteen minutes ride from the wharf.

High Append 4th 1881

I suppose you will be looking for something as regards to the flow. Well, we are still looking at it and the prospects are good, that we will soon be able to swing on our front gate, and gaze at the flow at the same time. It has done some good solid work since you left. On the Hilo side, it is coming down the ravine at the divide, has reached nearly the lowest point of the upper round hill. Up mauka, it has pushed overtowards the Hall road, should judge it to be about 1007 feet from the road, it may be a little more, or a little less. I am not good at distances. When I speak of the ravine at the divide, I mean the 24 bridge ravine. Yesterday morning, we found the lake just a going down the lat bridge ravine. You can just bet it went, I stopped there 3 hours, and it went at the rate of 80 paces per hour, and 50 paces the last hour, so you see it just trotting right along. I went up this morning, so that I could report what it did during the night, but since 7 o'clock this a.m. (Thursday) it commenced sherking up, and had not run very far up to 10 o'clock, when I left. I should think it had run since yestedny morning over 56 mills, and I more such runs would send it down to the wolcane road. It looked this morning as though it would let up and fill up behind. It is only a narrow stream, in some places not 10 feet wide, so you see it will have to build up so as to hold the heat.

Mr. Remnedy is building walls along the ravine in some of the low places to see if he cannot turn it from going into the fish-ponds, if it does not come down too thick. I think he will be able to turn it. I feel sure he could turn such a stream as was running yesterday. I have been to the flow every day since you left, and have taken some pretty hot walks. The only hot place we can see on the flow, is down on the flats, no smoke up above until you get up into the woods, somewhere about the "Island," you know where that is. The Laumais flow is smoking, don't know what it is doing. The smoke on the mountain has been as heavy as ever, and some nights as bright as ever.

EXAMINE THE NEW

[Extract from a letter of Hon. F. F. Low.]
I certify that I have taken out a "Tomtine" policy in the New York Life Insurance Co. for $20,000; that I regard it as the best and fairest pian of Life Insurance, and that the principles embedded in the new pian, after a careful examination, have removed the objections I have heretofore entertained against "Life Insurance."
I have steadily declined to insure until the "Tomina" was presented to me. Yours very truly.
